ase of Mabel Mather against an Insur ance Company Completed.

In city court Tuesday the case of Mabel A. Mather against the Prudentia Life Insurance company was again taken up and the arguments were made on both sides. The decision is now in the hands of the court. The plaintiff seeks to recover wages to the amount of $77.50, which she claims the company owes her. She was engaged as stenographer for a period of three months and at the ex-piration of about a month she was disharged. It is for the balance of the time that she was hired that she seeks to re-cover damages. The defendant's side of
